SENSORY TACTILE

FOR YOUNG CHILDREN AND SPECIAL NEEDS CHILDREN

Tactile sensory stimulation involves the sensation of touch and texture. Children with tactile sensory may have difficulty tolerating the sensations generated as they dress or groom themselves, or even as they chew food. Therapists work with tactile-sensitive individuals to desensitise them to unavoidable textures and touch sensations. Exposure to appropriate tactile variation during play can help widen what is acceptable and therefore reduce extreme reactions. Children will love exploring their surroundings with our fantastic selection of products and ideas aimed at touching, feeling and reaching out to explore the world through colour and texture.

CUDDLE BALLS

Made with the softest of fabrics to make you want to slip your hands in and bring in close. Ideal for cuddling and feeling safe and warm with tactile finish and available in modern colours. Approximately 25cm in diameter.

Writing Slopes

A CLASSROOM ESSENTIAL!

Clear Perspex writing slope allows children to write at the correct angle, helping to develop handwriting skills. These writing slopes are tough and durable and can be carried easily from classroom to classroom. Some children find writing on a flat surface difficult and it can sometimes lead development of an incorrect posture and poor motor control. Our writing slopes have a 20 degree angle, which helps to ensure greater comfort and more effective skills development.

The surface of the slope is purposefully made slippery to ensure children use both hands - one to hold the paper in place, the other to write! Used by teachers and occupational therapists, writing slopes can be used at school or home.

The simple design, complete with silicon ridge running along the edge to stop the paper/books from falling off. Made from wood for durability and item can be flat packed when not in use.

DEN-MAKING

THERE'S NOTHING MORE THRILLING THAN BUILDING YOUR OWN DEN.

Many of us have forgotten how exciting the simplest things in life can be. Adventures is lacking in so many children's lives. Far too many have never learned basic building and survival skills. This den making kit is about educating and inspiring children to explore the world around them. To encourage them to get off their computers and televisions and see that the real world is a far more exciting place to be! To show them that even in the back yard can be transformed into a base camp all that's needed is a little imagination.
